

Step Up Performing Arts was set up 21 years ago by Blackheath Singer Nathalie Richardson. After she left The Guildhall School of Music she wanted to establish a school which encourages self-confidence and discipline whilst having a great time doing singing, dancing and acting.

She said: "The key to Step Up's success is ensuring that every child is encouraged to develop their own individual skills in a nurturing and positive atmosphere."

"Whether the children go on into the performing arts or not, Step Up aims to give all the children the life skills required to be successful with their lives."

"Whether your child is young or a teenager, they are all offered the same opportunities. Many children have made potentially lifelong friends as a result of their time at Step Up."

Nathalie has had many notables success over the years, with groups such as Soul Mates, who won CBBC's Comic Relief does Glee Club, and Soul Train, who appeared on BBC One's Pitch Battle last year and Channel 5's Don't Stop Believing. She also has many children performing in West End shows such as Matilda and The Lion King.

As well as her continuing performing arts classes, she is now offering individual classes in street dance, drama and performing arts for all ages from two years to 16. She currently runs RIMU Music Day Nursery, which was rated outstanding last year, and has responded to the huge demand to offer performance classes to toddlers. All children at RIMU have classes in the performing arts as part of their dedicated music programme and many move on to Step Up at four but she has now decided to extend this to toddlers from two years of age.

Interested? Please come to the open morning where your child can have 20 minutes of each class to decide whether to sign up for September.
